The retiring governor of Missouri, Frederick D. Gardner, announces that the state has in the treasury $12,500,000, and almost $5,000,000 unappropriated in revenue funds. He makes this statement in considering recommending to the general assembly suspension of the penalty of one per cent for each month on delinquent taxpayers, until April 1st, 1921. He says those who have not paid their taxes are evidently unable to do so because of the tremendous crash in prices of hogs, corn, cattle and other products, and that suspension of penalty would give rural communities opportunity to sell their products. Arthur Hyde, the governor elect, will take charge of affairs of the state January 10th.
